Introducing the New Standard in Affordable Premium Pianos

There are many good reasons why the Schimmel instruments have remained the best-selling German pianos for decades. Numerous innovations provide pianists playing smaller pianos with the sound and touch characteristics of a full size concert grand piano. In addition, Schimmel's status as the most awarded German piano maker supports their great popularity. Above all, however, is Schimmel's passion to create flexible, musically inspiring instruments which are built to give you lasting musical experiences.

This is a compact piano without compromise. The Fridolin 116 benefits particularly from the long-established Schimmel piano construction, with enormous tonal complexity and sound power, comparable to much larger pianos. This model is ideal for home practice and studio use.

121

This medium sized piano is one of the most popular sizes for piano players, where the balance of size and sound are combined in the ideal way, producing a beautiful result. The unique cabinet design with piano legs that flow with an unbroken visual line all the way down to the castor creates the perfect harmony of appearance as well as sound.

123

The sound colours of this exceptional piano are particularly intense. Its wide dynamic range makes this piano a perfect partner for ambitious players. This popular model features professional height keyboard to suit advanced players. It is recommended for home, studio and performance use.

130

Built with tradition and dedication to detail, the 130 model is a triumph of piano building. The Schimmel specification of sound production and mechanical action provides the pianist with richness of tone and luxuriously balanced touch. This model features professional keyboard height and is recommended when more power is required.
